The need for health services increases as the population increases even as there are differences in person's age and sex. Based on the Guidelines on Local Planning developed by NEDA, the standard for local health services rendered by medical and allied personnel is one government physician per 20,000 population; one public health nurse per 20,000 population and one Rural Health nurse per 5,000 population. The service standards are subject to change according to the latest standards of sectoral agencies. Other service standards for medical and allied personnel are:

- 1 Government Dentist per 50,000 population
- 1 Rural Sanitary Inspector per 20,000 population
- 1 Barangay Health Worker per 20 households
- 1 Barangay Nutrition Scholar per barangay
- 1 Health Educator per 50,000 population
