Table 2.17
LAND CAPABILITY CLASSES/SUB-CLASSES

SYMBOL	BRIEF DESCRIPTION
X	Usually level land or slightly depressed, wherein water either sea or fresh stays most of the time and cannot be economically drained thus making it impossible to utilize the land either for crops, trees or pasture. Best suited for fishpond or for recreation.
Bw	Good land, level to nearly level; occurs in depressions; can be cultivated safely but requires protection from occasional overflow and easily applied conservation and soil management practices.
Bs	Good land, level to nearly level; can be cultivated safely but due to low fertility, shallowness and droughtiness needs special soil management and improvement practices to restore and maintain its productivity.
Be	Good land, nearly level to gently sloping, slightly eroded, can be cultivated safely but requires erosion control measures and easily applied conservation practices like control farming and strip cropping.
Ce	Moderately good land; moderately sloping; slightly to moderately eroded; can be cultivated safely if carefully planned erosion control measures, careful management and intensive conservation practices are observed. This will include installing of terraces supported by contour farming and strip cropping.
Cs	Moderately good land; moderately sloping; slightly eroded; can be cultivated safely but due problems special soil management and intensive conservation practices.
De	Fairly good land; strongly sloping; slightly to moderately eroded; can be cultivated occasionally if handled with care, requires very careful management and complex conservation practices which includes a system of terraces with properly laid out terrace outlets, strip cropping and contouring. Best suited to tree farm or pasture.
N	Steep, land; moderately to severely eroded, or shallow for cultivation making it unfit for seasonal cultivation. Suited to pasture or forest with careful management.

Zero-Kilometer Point Death March Marker

The history of Bagac also contributes to growth environment. Bagac was last stand of the Allied Forces in Philippines against the Japanese during the Second World War. It was between the two points from where the Zero Kilometer Death March of the prisoners was started after they lost to Japan in the Battle of Bataan. As such, it is a major source of interest to the Americans and Japanese alike. The Bataan Death March has come to symbolize the great defeat that took away the invincibility cloak of the Americans. To many, the resistance in Bataan & Corregidor was the last dash of hope. (Inform the younger generation about the WWII).

Death March

At the very spot where the infamous “Death March” started now stands a marker and a zero kilometer point post. Located at Camacho St. Barangay Bagumbayan, Bagac, Bataan.

Philippine-Japanese Friendship Tower

The monument, symbolizing the renewed friendship between Japan and the Philippines after the events of World War II, was erected by Risshō Kōsei Kai, a Japanese Buddhist organization. The tower was inaugurated on April 8, 1975 and is located about 200 m (660 ft) from where the Bataan Death March started. The 27-meter (89 ft) high tower is composed of three pillars interconnected by several multi-layer rings. (Let people know more about the history of WWII).

Battle of Toul Pocket

Heavy fighting took place in this area resulting from enemy infiltration to the rear prior to the deployment of troops on Pilar-Bagac line on the last week of January 1942. The enemy was pocketed and the ensuing engagement became known as the Battle of Toul Pockets. Participating USAFFE units were the 11th Infantry 11th Division and element of the 2nd Regular Division PAI, 71st Division and 91st Division all of the Philippine Army and Tank Groups. U.S. Army (Brig. Gen. James R.N. Weaver, AUS). In nearby Gogo-Cotar river valley to the West, other small pockets developed behind the 1st Regular Division front line in this "battle of the pockets". The enemy infiltration troops were totally destroyed by 18 February 1942 and marked a signal victory of the USAFFE.
